

CATCHES

I

AN APE, A LION, A FOX AND AN ASS.

Henry Purcell.

1. An ape, a li-on, a fox and an ass, Do shew forth man's life as it were in a glass;
 2. A dove, a spar-row, a par-rot, a crow, As plain-ly sets forth how you wo-men may know;

For ap-ish we are till twen-ty and one, And af-ter that li-ons till for-ty be gone:
 Harm-less they are till thir-teen be gone, Then wan-ton as spar-row still for-ty draws on:

Then wit-ty as fox-es till three score and ten, But af-ter that ass-es, And so no more men.
 Then prat-ing as par-rots till threescore be o'er, Then birds of ill o-men, And wo-men no more.

3 strophes à l'unisson

Clair part avec la voix 1

Clair 2 + Elise 1

Clair 3 + Elise 2 + Juliette 1

Signal de Clair pour le deuxième couplet tout seul